OLD LANDMARK REMOVED LAST SATURDAY

OLD BARN ON GARRO STREET
BUILT BY JOHN HOUGHTON,
FIRST TREASURER OF THIS COUNTY, TORN DOWN.

NEW REPLACES THE OLD

Another of the Links in the Chain
That Binds Us to the Earlier
Days is Broken, Bringing Memories of By-gone Times.

Time was. Time is. We hear the expression often declaring that the speaker will be true and faithful "while time shall last." Intimating that there may come a period when time shall cease. Observation teaches us that a stage is reached in the career of every man when he is stricken down, and death ends Time for him. But as one passes off the scene of activity, another takes up the tasks and duties he relinquishes, and Time goes on. When one young in years falls out by the wayside there is grief and mourning for the seeming untimely ending of a life, but when a man reaches the threescore and ten, and there is added the other ten, and the fourscore is reached, we are made to realize that the Psalmist David knew whereof he spoke when he said, "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away."

With the ending of Time for one who reaches the fourscore mark, comes a season of reminiscence—the life of the departed is reviewed and fitting words spoken. This is proper, and the mantle of charity is spread over his faults, and the good deeds and words are dwelt upon, that what has been well may serve as an example for those who follow, the best in that life be imitated, and as Dryden says, "A noble emulation heat the breast."

In keeping with the custom of "looking backward" when the aged one dies, when an old landmark is taken away the same feeling comes over the observer, and the mind turns to the persons and surroundings that caused the existence of the "thing" that the ruthless tooth of Time now says must end its period of existence.

Back in the early history of Marshall county and of Plymouth, there lived a man, many of whose descendants are still among us. His name was John Houghton, and he is described as being "a rare old English gentleman." His wife was Rachel Logan, whose brother Thomas, was the father of Mrs. Amanda Thompson, who moved from Plymouth to Chicago last August. The children of John Houghton were Emma, Zenobia, Thomas, Elizabeth, Rachel, John Catherine and James. The only one now living is the oldest, Aunt Emma Dickson, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. Jasper Hess in Dayton, Ohio. The history of Marshall county gives the information that John Houghton was the first Treasurer of the county, and served from May 3, 1836 to August 5, 1850.

On the south part of lot No. 86, Original Plat of the Town of Plymouth, corner of Walnut and Garro streets, stands the old Houghton home, now occupied by Mr. Barnes, the tailor. On the north half of the lot there was standing last Saturday morning a barn that had served to stable the horses of those early days, and had come on down to this date, becoming an eyesore to the neighborhood. The barn was owned by Orin Hoover, who sold the building to John R. Losey, Mr. Losey had built a new house just across the alley to the east, and wished the old barn removed, so sold it to Harry Hampton. A force of men commenced to wreck the building Saturday morning, and by sunset it was flat to the ground, and the lumber will be used by Mr. Hampton in building his new house on South street. Much of the material in the old building is that good poplar for which this county was noted, and is as sound as the day it was first sawed.

The passerby last Saturday simply saw some men tearing down an old barn. How long had it stood there? No one could tell exactly, and none can remember when it did not stand there. James Colter who passed through Plymouth going from Ohio to his home in Iowa a short time since, said "John Losey's house, and the new house he built this summer, changes things on that corner, but to the west the old Houghton place looks natural." The taking away of this old landmark last Saturday removes one more link in that already broken chain that binds the past and the present, and while we realize that the onward march of progress cannot be stayed, and we would not stay it if we could, yet this item may serve to bring back some interesting memories of the days of "Auld Lang Syne," and for the passing of this old barn we "drop the silent tear," and bid farewell to another of the "Old Timers" of Marshall county and of Plymouth.

A NOTRE DAME LADY'S APPEAL

W. T. Pogue, of Atlanta, Georgia, State Agent for the Home Insurance Company, who has been attending a meeting at Chicago, stopped off in Plymouth to see his mother, who lives here with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Reiter on Pearl street. Another sister is the wife of W. E. Leonard of Miner street. Mr. Pogue made only a short stay and left for Georgia this morning.

Some people have asked, "What is the matter with Ney Stevens?" and that all may understand just why he is a cripple, we will state that in his haste to act the role of peacemaker at the Overmyer-Garn-McNulty fight at Culver Nov. 10, he stepped in a hole in the road, and was hurt. He did not get it in the fight. The evidence at the trial was clear that Mr. Stevens got his injury from a fall caused by a hole in the road.
